BROOKLYN, 7; BOSTON, 6. Boston, April 21 .- The National League game to-day resulted in a victory for the Brooklyns, by bunching hits in the first, fourth and ninth innings. They played a faultless fielding game, and, but for the numerous battery errors of Hughes in the ninth, they would have made Boston's defeat more marked. The winning run was made by O'Brien getting a base on balls, and being sent in by a single by Collins and a double by Burns. Umpire McDermott was sick, and Weeden took his place. He fined O'Brien $25, Hughes and Collins $10 each, and Clark $5, lfor persistent "kicking." Attendance, 1,345. Score:

CAPTAIN COUCH DEAD.

The Noted Oklahoma Boomer Dies of Wounds Received While Fighting for a Claim.

Couch, an old pioneer and widely known as the organizer of the Oklahoma movement, died this morning at 8 o'clock. His death was the result of a wound inflicted by J. C. Adams with a Winchester rifle on April 4. When it became known that Capt. Couch could not live twenty-four hours a party was organized to lynch Adams. When Marshal Walker was informed of this yesterday he immediately took the prisoner to Wichita. He was placed in jail there. Couch was widely respected.

Captain Couch lived fighting for Oklahoma. He died fighting for the part of it which he believed belonged to him. After the bill had passed Congress providing for the opening of Oklahoma to settlement he secured a contract from the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad to build a switch, from the main line to the proposed site of from the main line to the proposed site of Oklahoma City. He was superintending this work when the provisions of the bill went into effect on May 1, 1889. He stepped from the railway right of way on to a choice claim adjoining the town site. His presence in the Territory at that hour made him a "sooner," and from then until the day he received the wound that caused his death he had been quarreling with a contestant, S. C. Adams, formerly of Springfield, Ill. On April 4 he was fencing his claim when Adams ordered him to desist. Couch refused, and Adams attacked him with a club Couch wrenched the club from his hands and Adams then picked up his rifle. Couch struggled with him and in the struggle gained possession of the rifle. Then Adams drew his re-volver, but Couch had the drop on him with the rifle, and forced him to throw away his weapon. Adams then retired but reappeared soon afterwards with another fife and commenced firing on Couch, who beat a retreat. He turned once to return the fire, and as he did so received a bullet in the knee. The doctors delayed amputation too long. Blood poisoning set in and the veteran boomer died at 3 o'clock this morning. Captain Couch, after the death, in 1884, of Colonel Payne, the original Oklahoma boomer, became the leader and champion of the movement. He led several raids into the territory, and on one occasion it took eight troops of cavalry to dis-lodge him and his companions from their posts, which they had fortified near Still-water. He was to have take part here to-morrow in the celebration of the first anniversary of the opening of the country to

GENERAL GRANT'S COURTSHIP DAYS. The Widow of the Great Commander Grows Reminiscent.

Mrs. Grant, instead of being infirm, is in her second girlhood, reveling in the enjoy-ment of exuberant health and perfect con-tentment. Asked to-day about the reminscences she is preparing, Mrs. Grant said: have been working on my book som time, but it is purely a family volume that I want for the children. I had no idea of publishing it. I wanted to leave it to my family as a sort of history, and if they cared to publish it they could do so. Our home life has been so broken that I feel the children brown little about it. the children know little about it except what they learn from print. It was to enlighten them, correct some errors and add new material that I began this work.

I wanted to be engaged and told him it would be much nicer than getting married, a sentiment he did not approve. We were quiet at the house that evening, and neither said a word of the secret. After supper he went back to the regiment, and a few days later General Taylor sent him to Camp Salubrity, in Louisiana. He was too shy to ask father, so he waited till he was stationed and wrote to him. Father never answered the

I read each one every day until the next one came, and then I laid it away in a little box. I have them all, but I don't think I shall put them in my book unless it is to be kept in the family. #### A Mermaid, or What? Jacksonville (Fla.) Special to St. Louis Globe-Demo

W. W. Stauton, mate of the schooner Addie Shaefler, now lying at the Market-house dock, while fishing for bass three hundred miles off St. Augustine, yesterday, drew in his line and found entangled therein the strangest fish, if it is a fish, that has ever been seen in this section. This strange creature, or mermaid, is about six Brother Jonathan head and face, keen and feet long, pure white and scaleless. The smooth shaven, save for the chin tuft, and head and face are wonderfully human in shape and feature. The shoulders are well outlined and very much resemble those of a woman. The breasts are well defined and show considerable development, while the hips and abdomen continue the human resemblance. In all there are four flippers, two of which are placed at the lower termination of the body and give one the impression that nature made an effort to supply the strange creature with lower limbs. Mr. Stanton confesses to quite a fright on the first sight of his queer prize, which, on being drawn on board, gave Grand Rapids opened the season at League

BAYOU SARA UNDER WATER

Louisiana Town Suddenly Submerged by Water from the Mississippi.

Midnight Efforts of the People to Save Themselves and Effects-High Tide at New Orleans-Scenes at the Crevasses.

BAYOU SARA, La., April 21.-After a most heroic struggle to save our city from the flood, we had to surrender to the great Father of Waters at 12:30 A. M. At that hour the guards reported that the levee had given way at the foot of Fountain street. A general alarm was sounded and the people responded promply to the call. This break was closed, but on examination it was found that the rising river was running over the front levee. All that human efforts could do had been done and at last the solemn cry went up all along the line, "Give up men; we are gone;" and then the confusion of the people can be better imagined than described. Every impromptu boat and raft was brought into requisition. Lanterns could be seen everywhere, mingled with the cries of women and children attempting to save their effects. Not a house in town has eshome of Major Irvine, supposed to be the highest, is submerged. Our town is in ruins, nothing but chaos and destruction meets the eye at every view. To-day it is raining bard, which makes the picture more gloomy. The water is also running over a large extent of the Pointe Conpec front, Taylor levee has given way, and the Fanny Yoor crevasse will propably prove a very serious one. The large levees from the last accounts are intact, but things look crit-

The water in the town is from two to seven and one-half feet deep. The tele-phone exchange has four feet of water on the floor. No lives were lost. There is a crevasse about four miles above here at Red Store, Pointe Coupee parish, reported to be 300 feet wide. The levee there was nine or ten feet high.

High Tide at New Orleans. NEW URLEANS, April 21,-A Drisk east-by southeast drizzling rain and occasional showers set in last midnight and continued until 6 P. M., causing a high tide along the gulf shore and a rise of six inches in the river, as shown by the gauge at the head of Canal street, the reading at 12 o'clock last night being fifteen feet eight-tenths and at noon to-day sixteen feet three-tenths, since which time there has been no apparent change. The gale has also carried the gulf water through Lake Borgne and Mississippi sound, entirely over the Louisville & Nashville railroad track in many places between Michou and Lookout Station causing washouts between the seventeen and eighteen-mile posts, and delaying all trains. The weather is still unsettled, but the wind has abated somewhat and Super-intendent Marshall thinks they will be able to repair the damage and send out mail trains to-morrow. The gale has driven the gulf water into Lake Pontchartrain to such an extent that the tide-water has covered the shell roads leading to Spanish Fort and West End; and also submerged a sparsely settled section of the northeastern suburbs of this city, doing some damage to gardens, etc.

About noon to-day the levee gave way just above the sugar-house on the Hon. T. . Wilkinson's Myrtle Grove plantation In twenty minutes the break was said to be fifty feet wide, and the water pouring through in an irresistible torrent. The levee at that point, some thirty miles below the city, on the right bank, was pretty high, and much damage will result from Nita crevasse is now more than two thousand feet wide and eight to fourteen feet deep. The government engineers yesterday laid a willow mattress across the lower end of the broken levee to prevent further caving.

The New York Herald's Vicksburg correspondent has just returned from a trip in the Sunflower river delta by boat. He describes the scenes in the overflowed region as pitiful. He thinks the loss of life has been greater than heretofore reported. He saw five bodies floating about in one place. One was a white woman and four were negroes. The bodies had to be left where they were, as there was no way to bury Deplorable Condition of Affairs. WASHINGTON, April 21. - In accordance with the request of Representative Coleman, of Louisiana, Secretary Proctor has transmitted to the House a report of Quartermaster-general Robinson in regard to the condition of affairs in the overflowed district of St. James and Ascension parishes, Louisiana. General Robinson savs that in pursuance to orders he went to White Hall and Convent, St. James parish. Convent is at the lower edge of the great Nita crevasse; White Hall is above, and is further back in the valley. Below, at | wife, and when he spoke of a fresh legal Convent, except near the levees, everything is flooded for about ten miles down. He says the situation is deplorable, and hundreds of planters have lost their crops, while thou-sands of laborers will soon be thrown out of employment. At Grande Point, where there were probably sixty to eighty fami-lies, the people escaped in skiffs, and the whole precinct is under water. Opposite the levee break at Nita numerous poor whites and colored people lost all but their lives. He recommends instant action tending to the relief of the sufferers by the United States. There is liable to be in St. James, and St. John and Ascension parishes a total of 5,000 persons destitute within a month.

HUSTLERS FROM THE WEST.

Some Peculiarities in Appearance and Manners of the Montana Delegation.

Washington Special in Philadelphia Record. Incidentally, the two queer-looking Republican Senators from Montana get a good deal of personal gratification out of the party position. They are such strong partisans that they would not sit at the desks which old Father Bassett placed for them on the Democratic side of the chamber, but insisted that he should transport them to the Republican side. So there they are, making the outside line upon the Republican side longer than it e er was in the history of the Senate. There being no other vacant desks on that side, they have to sit together. Not being deadly ene-mies, like the delegations from some other States in the Senate, this is rather convenient and agreeable for them than otherwise, and it makes them a great deal more interesting to the galleries, for they form an almost amusing contrast. Sanders is tall and Power is short, and Sanders is a bushy-haired, big-bearded brunette, who looks more like Blackbeard, the pirate, while Power is a smooth-faced, gray-haired blende, who looks like a retired clergyman. From the gallery, owing to the optical illusions of the Senate atmosphere, Power really looks more like a theological student; but close to him he is as wrinkled as a withered apple. Sanders is awkward and rustic, while Power is graceful and urbane in his manners.

Both are what are called hustlers, like all the other new men from the Northwest. But neither of them is, after all, as energetic, enterprising and successful as a Representative from Montana who is constantly taken for "Brother Jonathan" by the tourists who see him rushing through the corridors of the Capitol. He has the a cool, confident, steady eye which can catch the Speaker's or any other may's whenever be wants it.

"Oleaginous Tom" they call Representa-tive Carter out in Montana, and he well deserves it, for he is the slickest citizen who ever came to Congress from anywhere. He is the only man in either house I know of who has gotten everything he wanted out of this Congress so far, and expects to get everything more which he or any of his constituents may desire. It is largely a matter of industry and manner. He works, apparently, from 12 o'clock one night until 12 o'clock the next; and yet is always fresh and smiling. His manner is sweet and soothing, his voice is low, and all his words and gestures conciliatory. And yet the combi-nation is not disagreeable, as it would probably be if it were found in any other man. Brother Jonathan knows everybody in the ways of getting things, both at the Cap- arrives.

itol and in the departments, and the way he does round them up astonishes even he does round them up astonishes even Power and Sanders. Carter is the life of the Western Congressional Association, the first congressional club ever formed, and uses its powers and opportunities most discreetly in accomplishing his purposes. The association has a pleasant house in the midst of the principal hotels and clubhouses, and makes everybody feel at home who gets inside its doors. Saturday nights it has special entertainments for its friends, with a more or less formal talk on friends, with a more or less formal talk on some Western topic by some distinguished man, and then a lot of informal conversation over the cigars and wines. It is here that the Western men, and particularly the Northwestern men (although all the members of the association live west of the Min bers of the association live west of the Mississippi river) concoct all their schemes for "getting even," as they say, "with the effete East," which has had in privileges and appropriations so much more than the West that it will take years to get enough for the West to balance the account. In all these conneils Brother Jonathan Carter is the best adviser, and his judgment is respected as the best by men who were famous before he was known.

A. T. STEWART'S HOME LIFE.

In the Bosom of His Family He Threw Off

Dignity-Secret of Hilton's Supremacy. Blakely Hall, in Philadelphia Times. If it is true that we are attracted to our friends by qualities which they possess and which we lack, then there was every reason in the world why Stewart and Hilton should have joined hands and hearts and remained the warmest friends conceivable for thirty years. Stewart was small, spare, shy, intensely self-conscious and avaricious. He had an overweening ambition, and he thought of his trade night and day. His brow had a settled frown. His manner was testy. The faculty which he manner was testy. The faculty which he possessed in an extreme degree was that of thorough absorption in his own plans. At all times he dreaded meeting people, and, though he was ambitious, he never felt able to go out in the world and push his way socially.

In one corner of his big palace on Fifth avenue dwelt his mother, an ignorant, common little Irish woman, who had formerly kept a small shop down in Franklin street.

In another corner lived the great mer-

In another corner lived the great mer-chant's wife. She, too, was of humble man-ner and birth, and of shrinking disposition. They were little people. Amid the gorgeous surroundings of the big house they were cowed. The mother had a brogue. The wife was not a woman of much education.

They were awed by it all.

A relative of Mrs. Stewart's once told me f a little incident which was indicative of the home-life of the Stewarts. The relative. in question was then a girl of nineteen and rather impulsive and thoughtless. A little ward of hers, in whom Mrs. Stewart was also interested, died one night in a hospital, and the girl ran direct to the Stewart house to tell the story. She hurried past the servant at the door, and, turning to a little door on the left of the vestibule, ran up a short stair-case that led to the small apartments that were occupied by the old mother of the dry-goods prince. She had not been announced, and as she reached the top of the stair-case the girl heard a roar of langhter such as she had never heard in that house before. Involuntarily she paused for a moment, and then the voice of Stewart's mother rose above the laughter, telling an Irish story in the thickest brogue in the world. The girl glanced through a door that stood ajar and was amazed.

In the middle of the small room stood the little old mother of America's greatest merchant holding her skirts up an inch or two trom the floor and giving an imitation of a County Kerry woman talking to her pig, while on a foot-stool by the fire sat Mrs. Stewart with her hair down, tittering and wagging her head. Perched on the arm of a chair, hugging his knees, was the great millionaire himself. He wore neither coat nor waistcoat, and his braces hung down at his side. He had taken off his collar and his thin hair was tousled. Both his arms were clasped around his knees and he rocked back and forth, while his laughter rose above the other two voices.

The girl was aghast. She had been at the house constantly all her life, but never before had she seen the trio except under their masks of half-frightened hauteur. For an instant she stood staring at the unusual spectacle. Then her skirt was pulled gently and the frightened old servant, who had admitted her, led the way down stairs. She followed noiselessly. The great salons and lefty marble passageways with their and lofty marble passageways, with their crystal chandeliers and statuary, stretched out on either side in the dim light. The servant whispered in great agitation that if Mr. Stewart suspected that any one had seen him while without his cloak of dignity his anger would know no bounds.
The girl stole away. "It was the only glimpse I ever had," she said, "of the family as it really was, though I continued to trequent the house till the end."

No visitor was ever admitted to such scenes as these save one—Henry Hilton. No relative found a welcome at the home such as Hilton always received. He was one of the family in earnest. One reason was because Hilton was, in the beginning, a protege of Mrs. Stewart's, and it was on her account that the husband first took the young lawyer up. I do not think the causes which led to the intimacy between the Hiltons and the Stewarts have ever received publicity. It occurred in this wise;
Mrs. A. T. Stewart had a male consin of whose daughter she was very fond. This daughter married Henry Hilton. It was the custom of the great merchant to talk over his business anairs very often with his entanglement which came up one day, Mrs. Stewart prevailed upon him to call in young Hilton. The case was handled in a satisfactory manner, but while it was pending Hilton took frequent occasion to call at the Stewart house, where he talked over matters with his wealthy client. He was made welcome by Mrs. Stewart. Few vis-itors received this distinction.

Hilton was robust, unctuous, genial, full of assurance, fond of social pleasures, ag-gressive, indifferent to slights and fond of a row. These characteristics were in every sense lacking in Stewart's character. The breezy personality of the tactful young lawyer was a relief in the stilted and affected household of Stewart. The millionaire was thirty years older than the lawyer. He began almost at once to use the stockilybuilt and assertive young attorney as a shield. Importunities and appeals of every kind poured in on the great millionaire at all times. He was testy, and age was beginning to tell on him. At the instigation of his private lawyer he began to get rid of troublesome callers by saying: "Go and see Hilton about it," or "Ask Hilton to look into the matter; I haven't time." Hilton couldn't get enough to do. He was at the office of Stewart early, and at 6 o'clock nearly every night for many years he went home with the dry-goods man, and dined at the Stewart house. The older man shirked a fight; the younger one sought it. Judge Hilton's character is a remarkable one. He has a faculty for making enemies which is practically unrivaled. If he has an end to gain he fixes his eyes on it and dashes ahead. It makes no difference whether a friend or a foe is in the way, he rushes on with equal force. Talking of the Stewart case yesterday he was as impetuous, vehement and earnest as he was thirty years ago. Nothing strengthens him so much as opposition. One can understand how Stewart leaned on a man of this caliber.

The Hendricks Monument. The Hendricks monument committee has received notice of the arrival of the monu ment at New York city, which came on the steamer India from Florence, and arrived on Saturday. It is thought the monument can be made ready for unveiling about the last of May, as the work of Washington who is worth knowing, and all | erection will be entered upon as soon as it

AMUSEMENTS.

ENGLISH'S OPERA-HOUSE-"TWELVE TEMP-

TATIONS." English's Opera-house was literally packed last night, there being scarcely standing-room. Gilmore's spectacular play, "The Twelve Temptations," was the attraction. Like all other pieces of the sort. it depends altogether upon scenic effects, ballet and specialties for success. In the first two particulars it is not lacking but its specialties are too few. The Devans are clever in their ladder-balancing act. Some novelties are introduced in the ballet, notably "Riding on Grandpa's Shoulders" and the live cockatoo dance. The dancing of the premieres, Marie Bonfanti and Eloise, is excellent. The Parisian Belle ballet and the ballet of all nations, are attractive features. The plot, what there is of it, follows the lines of similar productions very closely, there being nothing at all new in this particular. Jacques Kruger makes considerable fun as the frightened servant, without which character no spectacular production would be complete. Jessie West is quite a pretty Bright Eyes and the rest of the characters. Bright Eyes, and the rest of the characters are up to the mark as such characters go.
The costuming is good, and the scenery very pretty. The piece will be given to-night for the last time.

THE PARK THEATER-ADA GRAY. Ada Gray and her company began a week's engagement at the Park Theater yesterday and large audiences saw the performance of "East Lynne" in the afternoon formance of "East Lynne" in the afternoon and last night. The play is handsomely mounted and the presentation as a whole is very strong. Miss Gray appears in the dual role of Lady Isabel and Madam Vine and is given fairly good support by John Hazelrigg as Sir Francis Levison, John V. Milton as Archibald Carlyle, Frank Bosworth as Lord Severin and Miss Carrie Wright as Corney Carlyle. Miss Ella Beach plays the part of Barbara Hare and gives a satisfactory performance of it. "East Lynne" will be repeated this afternoon and to-night, but will be replaced with "The Ring of Iron," to-morrow.

William Muldoon, who is at the head of the athletic combination that will give a performance at English's Opera-house to-morrow night, traveled with Mme. Mod-jeska and her company one season, appear-ing in the wrestling scene in "As You Like It."

W. S. Deball, one of the leading members of the company that will present Gilbert & Sullivan's new opera, "The Gondoliers," at the Grand Thursday night, is popular in Indianapolis. Three or four years since he directed one of the local musical organiza-tions in a presentation of the "Frog Opera" and became quite a favorite with the sing-ers of the city. Since then he has been here several times with different opera and dramatic companies.
